Cal Poly Public Safety reminds all employees to secure offices, labs and other facilities before leaving for winter break. Theft and crimes of opportunity remain the most prevalent during breaks and times when the campus is not highly populated. Remember to lock doors, shut blinds and take home any personal and valuable items or store them in a secured, out-of-sight area. And for those traveling this season, remember to give your home a “someone-is-home” look by putting lights and a radio on a timer.

Faculty and staff who attended the Nov. 30 holiday reception, hosted by President Armstrong and Mrs. Sharon Armstrong, donated 210.2 pounds of food to the Cal Poly Basic Needs and Food Pantry. “We were overwhelmed by the generosity,” said Taffy Gonzalez, Food Pantry coordinator. “Since a recent study indicated 39 percent of Cal Poly students had experienced food insecurity in the past six months, the need is great to keep the Food Pantry filled with nutritious food. Since the party was held just before finals week, it was a wonderful time to receive such a large donation.”

Campus Basic Needs received 64 coats and jackets for students in need through its Winter Coat Drive. “We’d like to thank those who donated,” said Hannah L. Steen of Wellbeing Services. “Coats and jackets will be distributed in winter quarter.” There is still time to participate. Steen said employees may contribute to the program through Friday, Dec. 22.
